At the remainder of the stations the observations have been made during various periods less than ten years. Where it has been obvious that these records have fallen in abnormally wet or abnormally dry seasons an attempt has been made to rectify them. No guarantee as to the accuracy of this rectification can be made, nor any guarantee as to the accuracy of the map as a whole. All that may be said is that the map represents the normal distribution of precipitation so far as the data at present existent will allow.
